Global Issues

For centuries, people have made major changes in their lives. Many have moved to other countries in search of new lives. One of the great periods of immigration was between 1800 and 1920. At that time, 23 million immigrants arrived in the United States. Most of them came from poor towns and villages in Southern and Eastern Europe. They had one thing in common: They believed that in the United States, life was going to be better for them. It was the land of freedom and prosperity. The trip across the ocean for poor immigrants was terrible. Men, women, and children stayed in crowded and smelly compartments, deep down in the hold of the ship. They had no showers, and there were no dining rooms for them. When immigrants landed in New York, ferryboats took them to Ellis Island, where immigration officers questioned the new arrivals, and doctors examined them. Those who failed the medical exam had to go back to their native countries. Sometimes if a child was ill, the entire family had to return. Ellis Island became known as "Heartbreak Island" among immigrants.

Α	Write (T) for True and (F) for False:	True	False
1	People who were sick had to go back to their country
2	The voyage was hard, but most immigrants had comfortable compartments
3	At Ellis island, the role of the officials was to give immigrants information about the United States
4	Ellis Island became known as "Heartbreak Island" among immigrants
5	Many of the immigrants were poor
6	Many immigrants came to the United states in the late 1800s and early 1900s
